20 Field Marshal von Rundstedt in Normandy

It's often been noted war is a young man's game, and at the time of the Normandy invasion von Rundstedt was far from his prime, both physically and intellectually. He was 69-years-old in June 1944, and had been a serving soldier for 52 years.

32 The German Anti-Partisan War in the Ukraine

During the German invasion of Russia, the invaders depended on a limited number of "security divisions" for use behind the lines. They deployed in conjunction with, and augmented by, SS and police units. Additional security forces were developed by raising anti-communist collaborationist units.

40 Food as Strategy

World War II spawned worldwide food shortages that struck down tens of millions who died in obscurity, even as the news media concentrated on battlefields where death came with spectacular drama.
